There's a Difference in Seeds

In these years of larger and larger companies, super markets, bigger farms and high pressure living there still seems to be a place for common folks who don't claim recognition or base ambition on size. Such is the story of Scotts Farm Seeds whose reputation and stability is supported by more than 80 years of continuous handling and cleaning of farm seeds.

We've never had the desire to be bigger than someone else but rather to furnish customers with dependable high quality seed so that year after year they are pleased with the crops they get and return to SCOTTS for their seed requirements. By operating in a more limited area crop problems can be given personal and individual attention and we in turn can keep up to date on Experiment Station and progressive farmer recommendations.

Scott customers have always been considered rather particular in what they buy and who want and appreciate farm seeds that are better than can generally be obtained elsewhere. Then, too, many are interested in highly recommended new varieties and in information about their advantages.

Extension agents, Vocational instructors and Experiment Stations often refer inquiries to SCOTTS as one of the first sources of new varieties as well as a dependable place to get clean quality seeds. To us, the respect of customers and high regard held by agricultural leaders indicates that integrity and sincere effort to keep up to date and furnish the best continues to be a worthwhile ambition.

Each merchant selling farm seeds places a value on the seed he handles. Cut rates or low prices indicates how little he respects or has confidence in the seed being sold. You, of course, are buying more than seed--it is the crop that will be produced on your land during the coming season or even for the next several years. Experience has proved the best to be the cheapest in the long run.

We are anxious that each year folks continue to look to and depend on us for the cleanest and best in the old standby varieties as well as in new farm seeds. An order from one who has used SCOTTS seed for 20 years is just as important as is the order from a new customer.

The finest seed obtainable is on hand at prices you will find year after year fair and reasonable. Get your order in the mail today.

Sincerely yours,

THE SCOTT FARM SEED COMPANY
